Turning options into decisions.

Your option has fallen in price to less than 20% of its original costs. There are several alternative actions, which may be appropriate to consider at this time:

Possible actions:

1. If there is only about one week left to expiration, it may pay to just wait for expiration to avoid the cost of buying back the option.
2. Consider buying back the option with the intent of rolling to a lower strike price for the next write.
3. Consider buying back the option with the intent of rolling out to a later month, either now or when the stock rises again.
